

Lifelong benefits of equestrian sport include:

- Development of physical strength and coordination
- Building confidence to overcome challenges
- Developing patience
- Learning responsibility for another
- Deepening a respect for animals
- Learning to give and follow directions
- Increased awareness of body language and non-verbal communication
- Practical application of science and math skills
- New friendships, human and equine.

There's no place like a barn to provide kids with a real-life way to apply skills in science, math, communication, dexterity, patience, balance and more!

Introduction to Riding and Horsemanship
A program for home-schooled horse enthusiasts

We are pleased to offer a special discounted lesson program to area homeschoolers who have a love of horses and would like to learn to ride. In our program, learning about horses is just as important – and just as fun – as learning to ride!

The package includes four 90-minute lessons. Each lesson provides 60 minutes of group equestrian studies and a 30-minute semi-private riding lesson.

The equestrian studies component is a fun, fact-filled course to learn all kinds of cool things about our equine friends. Students learn safety, horse behavior, grooming, hoof care, tack and equipment, and more. They personally handle horses and ponies each lesson. When scheduling allows, students are exposed to on-site veterinarians and farriers.

The riding component is limited to two riders per class to ensure safety and lots of personal attention. Each 30-minute mounted class emphasizes safety and confidence-building while establishing a strong foundation of fundamental riding skills. Lessons follow our instructional curriculum, and are taught at the level of the least experienced rider.
